WEEKLY CONNECTION WITH MICHAEL LOY

The Great Things December Brings

The snow and cold this week has sure made the first week of December feel like winter is officially here. In spite of the chill, there was a lot of heat being generated at the Adult Day Services and Prevocational Services Holiday event on Thursday at the Rothschild Pavilion. Our consumers were cutting up the dance floor with moves inspired by their pure joy. Good food, cheer and fun was had by all who attended. Thank you to Toni Kellner and the entire Community Living team on putting together another fun filled celebration.

This week also brought a major milestone in our Campus Renovation Plan. We had our architectural and design team onsite again on Tuesday and Wednesday. We came into the week with about 10-20% of the project defined. Our work this week was to match up space needs with the preliminary design. The picture is starting to become more clear and I am getting more and more encouraged by all we will be able to accomplish through this plan. From here our architects and design team will go back and bring us something closer to 60% complete after the 1st of the year. We are planning to share our plans with staff and our community early in 2019. The project will be bid out in the spring and we will have people starting to work on phase 1 around the same time. The New Year will bring a lot of action here on our main campus.

Last but not least, congratulations again to Melissa Stockwell our November Employee of the Month. Melissa’s recognition celebration was hosted on Thursday and the room was packed. In addition to a good representation of staff there were a number of our Mount View residents in attendance. Their love for Melissa was clear. She has been singing to their hearts for 14 years now and we couldn’t be more appreciative of all she does for them and all the people we serve. She’s an inspiration for so many.

Make it a great day.

We all know what these deer were thinking....
“That warm water Aquatic Services place sure does look good! Do you think they will let us in?”
These four deer were just hanging out by the Wausau Campus near the pool and airport earlier this week.

There were no right or wrong answers and the survey was designed to provide our organization with feedback so that we can improve our staff training and patient services. We will get results and report out some overall findings in the near future. Stay tuned!

To thank you for your time and commitment to the Zerosuicide Initiative, we also included a drawing for prizes from all those who complete the survey. The sooner you completed the survey, the more entries you received in the drawing.

“Bill Metter, NCHC Board Member, contacted me and told me that he wanted to give me some feedback on his experience with NCHC’s Inpatient Hospital.

He was super complimentary of the staff, saying that they were communicative and caring. He said that he arranged to take a patient to church and made arrangement for pickup. The staff made sure the patient was dressed and ready at that time to go. Everyone was positive and helpful and he felt that we were truly giving this patient the best care. He said the staff was deserving of recognition for how compassionate and friendly they were. He specifically mentioned Heather Yang as being very helpful.

The kindness that the staff showed this patient and visitor was exemplary and commendable.”

Eating More Fruits And Vegetables Is Good For Your Heart!

Two groups of foods that are good for the heart are fruits and vegetables. These are good for your heart because of what they contain and what they don’t contain. Fruits and vegetables are already naturally low in fat, calories, and sodium. They also have no cholesterol and contain fiber and water along with many vitamins, minerals, and antioxidants. All of these benefits help to keep your heart healthy. The key is to fill your plate with a variety of fruits and vegetables every day because – more matters! Here are some tips that help you make it 5 a day!

How to improve your 5 a Day habits: Eat a fruit or vegetable with every meal. If half a plate of fruits and vegetables seems like an unreachable goal for you right now, start by simply adding one fruit or veggie to each meal. You can eat them as a side—think a cup of green beans with dinner or a banana with breakfast—or simply start adding them to foods you already eat. Fruit is a cinch to add to oatmeal, yogurt and cereal in the morning. Add onions and peppers to meat dishes, or pile a few of your favorite vegetables onto your sandwich. Once you start working them in, you’ll welcome the new additions!

Snack smart. Instead of hitting the vending machine for an afternoon pick-me-up, start snacking on fruits and vegetables. Cut veggies dipped in hummus or sliced fruit with yogurt dip will satisfy you more than a candy bar will. Make it a habit to order a salad or vegetable-based soup when you’re out at restaurants. These fiber-rich starters may keep you from overeating when your meal comes; in addition to helping you add more vegetables into your day.

Keep them in sight and in mind. Just like you keep sweets out of sight to discourage constant snacking, keeping fruits and veggies in sight will help you think of them as an option for eating. Stock a fruit bowl at work each week and keep a bowl on the kitchen counter at home so you’ll be more likely to eat it when you’re hungry.

Drink up. While you should limit the number of calories you get from beverages, if you have trouble fitting fruits and vegetables into your busy life, work them into a drink that you can take on the go. Try out smoothie recipes until you find a few you love and work them into your rotation as a breakfast or afternoon snack option. You can easily get several fruit and vegetable servings in a yummy beverage. If you simply want juice, look for 100 percent fruit or vegetable juice for it to count as a serving, but limit yourself to no more than one serving of fruit or vegetable juice per day, as the calories are high and juice removes some of the other benefits of produce (such as fiber).

Chop them up. If you have a hard time biting into big vegetables, try slicing and dicing them into a more manageable size. Shred carrots and zucchini or finely dice onions, pepper and spinach to hide in pasta sauces, hamburger patties, omelets and casseroles.

Slurp some soup! Soups and stews can be a nutritious, filling way to get lots of vegetables into a meal. Soup is an easy way to increase the variety of veggies you eat, too.
